

The Children's Center at Carolina Park celebrated the opening of the school with a ribbon cutting ceremony on August 9, 2007. With the help of Mt. Pleasant Mayor, Harry M. Hallman, Ann Gillespie and son Carter, the first child enrolled in the school, cut the ribbon and then Director, Chris Marino, surrounded by the school's teachers and staff welcomed the crowd inside to tour the building. If you would like to tour the building please contact us.

"Today we realize a long-time family dream to create an early childhood education center where kids can be kids, but also a place where children are safe and well cared for so they can be learning everyday. For those of us who will be here everyday with the children, the fun is just beginning. The support for the pre-school from the Mt. Pleasant community has been very strong and we're just thrilled to finally open the doors and welcome you all inside," said Marino.

Unlike most pre-schools in the Charleston area, The Center has hired a team of experienced professional teachers who hold bachelor's degrees and in some cases master's degrees, in early childhood education, elementary education, reading readiness and special education. These are teachers with recent, relevant classroom experience gained from teaching in local public schools and private pre-schools in the tri-county area.
